Drift Creek Ranch - Lincoln City, Oregon
Comprised of 126 +/- acres of pristine Oregon Coast Range forest, the ranch contains approximately 15 acres of cross-fenced pasture, a 3,932 sqft custom creekside home, large barn, tack room and more. In addition to the 1-mile secluded stretch of Drift Creek frontage, the property affords adjacent access to an added 1.2 miles of private fishing on hard-to-access public land upstream of the ranch. This provides an incoming owner with access to over 2 miles of riffles, runs and deep pools that hold 10-40 pound fresh, wild steelhead and salmon. With healthy runs of fall Chinook and Coho salmon and large runs of wild winter and summer steelhead, complimented by a population of sea-run cutthroat trout and a few Chum salmon, Drift Creek can out-rival any wild anadromous fishery and keep any angler entertained year-round. Located south of Lincoln City on the northern coast, the property is 10 minutes from the renowned Salishan Spa and Golf Resort in Gleneden Beach. With fine dining, spa, tennis courts and a stunning 18-hole Jacobsen-designed golf course overlooking Siletz Bay and the Pacific Ocean, Salishan Resort offers endless resort and recreational opportunities. While the ranch is nearby many high-end amenities, the property feels private, with approximately half of the riverfront property in a deep forested canyon. A resident Roosevelt elk herd of between 20-60 head calls this property home, and ample wildlife besides. With epic fishing, close proximity to recreational amenities including sailing, deep sea fishing, sea kayaking and exploring the many beaches, Drift Creek Ranch is a magnificent offering.

Grays Lake Outlet Ranch - Wayan, Idaho
Comprised of 480 deeded acres and located in the picturesque Caribou Range of the Rocky Mountains of southeastern Idaho is the Grays Lake Outlet Ranch. It borders the Greater Yellowstone Ecosystem, and has access to the Caribou-Targhee National Forest trail systems, 4 miles to the east, and over 3 million acres of public lands. The Grays Lake Wildlife Refuge is 2 miles south of the ranch, consisting of a 22,000-acre protected area providing important habitat for Sandhill cranes, Trumpeter swans and other various breeds of waterfowl, shore and grassland birds. The nearby resort community of Jackson Hole is 70 miles to the north and Idaho Falls is 45 miles northwest. Outlet Creek meanders through the ranch for 1½ miles entering from the southern pasture lands and flowing through a series of rock outcappings in a canyon like setting. The creek is supplemented with 4 springs, which maintain a tailwater quality with constant temperature and flow rate year-round, which provides an excellent fish habitat. The Outlet Creek has been a focal point for the current owners who have worked collaboratively with local government agencies and enhancement specialists to preserve and enhance the riparian corridor that benefits the native cutthroat trout populations and wintering elk and Mule deer. Of the 480 acres, approximately 340 acres have been in productive agriculture. In the fall of 2011 approximately 300 acres were removed from the Conservation Reserve Program (CRP), which has restored most of the property to native vegetation. Power is available with sufficient road frontage to meet the Bonneville County building permit requirements. With access to national forest, abundant wildlife and fishing onsite, Grays Lake Outlet Ranch lies in the heart of the vast recreational amenities of the West.

Conservation Assistance for Landowners

By Terry Fieseler, Wyoming Broker

Are you interested in improving your ranch’s grazing, croplands, forest, wildlife habitat or water quality? While there are sometimes local soil, forestry and aquatic specialists to consult with, another great source is your state office of the National Resources Conservation Service (NRCS). The NRCS offers numerous conservation programs and services to assist landowners, and in cooperation with local organizations, offer financial and technical assistance, conservation easements and more. The NRCS’s natural resources conservation programs help landowners reduce soil erosion, enhance water supplies, improve water quality, increase wildlife habitat and reduce damages caused by floods and other natural disasters. These enhanced natural resources help sustain agricultural productivity and environmental quality while supporting continued economic development, recreation and scenic beauty.

One of these programs includes the Wildlife Habitat Incentive Program (WHIP), which is a voluntary program for conservation-minded landowners interested in developing and improving wildlife habitat on agricultural land, non-industrial private forest land and Tribal Reservation land. The Food, Conservation, and Energy Act of 2008 reauthorized WHIP as a voluntary approach to improving wildlife habitat in our Nation. The NRCS administers WHIP to provide both technical assistance and funding up to a 75% cost-share for the improvement of fish and wildlife habitat. WHIP cost-share agreements generally last from one year after the last conservation practice is implemented to 10 years from the date the agreement is signed. In order to provide direction to the State and local levels for implementing WHIP to achieve its objective, NRCS has established the following national priorities:

- Promote the restoration of important/declining native fish and wildlife habitats
- Protect, restore, develop or enhance fish and wildlife habitat to benefit at-risk species
- Reduce the impacts of invasive species on fish and wildlife habitats
- Protect, restore, develop or enhance important/declining aquatic wildlife species’ habitats
- Protect, restore, develop or enhance important migration and other movement corridors for wildlife

For more information on WHIP and the many other programs and services that the NRCS has to offer, or to contact your state office, go to their web site www.nrcs.usda.gov.

Conservation Opinion: Western Voters Call Themselves Conservationists

Excerpt from Environment & Energy Daily

by Jennifer Yachnin

Nearly two-thirds of voters in Western states label themselves as conservationists regardless of their political affiliations, according to a new survey released by Colorado College yesterday.

The Colorado Springs, Colo.-based liberal arts college partnered with two partisan polling firms, Public Opinion Strategies and Fairbank, Maslin, Maullin, Metz & Associates, to conduct its second "State of the Rockies" survey, which gauges the opinions of 2,400 registered voters in six Western states. The survey, conducted Jan. 2-5 and Jan. 7, polled voters in Arizona, Colorado, Montana, New Mexico, Utah and Wyoming on a range of general environmental questions as well as on the likability of state governors and preferences in select Senate races. The poll results had a 2-point margin of error for data on all states, and a 4.9-point margin of error for data on individual states.

In a teleconference announcing the poll's results, Public Opinion Strategies GOP pollster Lori Weigel noted that 65 percent of those individuals surveyed identified themselves as "conservationists." Survey takers were also given the option of identifying with the conservative tea party or liberal occupy movements, and some selected multiple groups. "Conservationist is actually a group that bridges more voters throughout this region, including some interesting groups," Weigel said. She noted that among those individuals who identified as tea party-affiliated -- about 29 percent of those surveyed -- 67 percent also called themselves conservationists.

The survey did not define conservationist for poll respondents, Democratic pollster Dave Metz of Fairbank, Maslin said. Participants were only asked which groups they would identify themselves with. According to survey data, among those polled, 37 percent identified as Republicans, 32 percent as Democrats and 29 percent as independents.

The State of the Rockies project also surveyed voters on a number of general questions about support for environmental regulations, public land use and public funding to enforce and support both. "Voters are increasingly telling us we can protect land and water and have a strong economy at the same time," Weigel said. "Part of this may be due to the sense in these states ... that public lands are an essential part of their state's economy." According to the survey, 78 percent of those polled agreed with the statement "We can protect land and water and have a strong economy with good jobs at the same time, without having to choose one over the other."

Among individuals who self-identified as Republicans, 76 percent agreed with the statement, as did 75 percent of self-identified independents and 84 percent of self-identified Democrats. High percentages of poll takers also agreed on questions about whether public lands are key to a state's economy, ranging from 85 percent of participants in New Mexico to 97 percent in Wyoming. "The data has been very consistent from year to year. We see a strong conservationist ethic in the West," Metz said.

Mountain Spirit Lodge on the Navajo River - Chromo, Colorado

Located in Chromo, Colorado, these 115 acres enjoy one mile of Navajo River frontage and boast a main lodge, river house, barn and outbuildings. Truly a magical place where art and nature coexist, Mountain Spirit Lodge on the Navajo River has some of the best fly fishing in the lower 48 states, in addition to resident wildlife including turkey, elk, Mule deer, black bear and lion. The main lodge is comprised of 6,000 square feet and was built from 100-year-old hand-hewn logs that were transported from Tennessee. Featuring a 35-foot tall stone fireplace in the great room and a dining room that showcases a 17-foot black walnut table, this lodge exudes rustic elegance. There are four large bedrooms each with double-sized antique bathtubs and wood-burning stoves and two additional "staff quarters" in the basement of the lodge. The river house is situated on the Navajo River and is a short walk to the main lodge. The original structure was built in the early 1900s by author Will Price, and it was featured in many of his published stories. Fully renovated, it has four bedrooms, each with a private bath, kitchen and several fireplaces throughout. The river house is ideal for guest quarters or an owner retreat. The Mountain Spirit Lodge on the Navajo River is a sportsman’s paradise wonderfully suited for families, corporations or anyone looking for a majestic getaway.

Yampa TailWaters Preserve - Steamboat Springs, Colorado

Yampa TailWaters Preserve is a legacy fishing retreat offering arguably, the single best, private tailwater fishery in North America given its year-round fishing season. Large rainbow and brown trout migrate up 128 miles of the undammed Yampa River to spawn and reside in this first mile and three quarters of tailwaters below Catamount Dam. The 514-acre ranch is ideally situated in the heart of the amenity-rich splendor of the famed resort valley of Steamboat Springs. With nutrient rich water teeming with trophy trout, this rare offering combines one of the premier fisheries in the country with quiet, peaceful seclusion as well as exceptional accessibility. Yampa TailWaters Preserve boasts approximately a mile and three quarters of both sides of the Yampa River with completely private wild trout fishing that is consistently good in fall, winter, spring and summer. The river enters the property just below Catamount Dam, and is full of exceptional food resources for the multitudes of aggressive, primarily wild trout. The challenge of this truly outstanding fishery is not tricking the trout to eat your fly, but managing to land these exquisite species as they can put on red-hot runs upstream. Fish from 25”-30” are not uncommon. Not only a unique offering because of the miles of private world-class Yampa River fishing onsite, the ranch represents an opportunity to preserve and enhance one the largest contiguous parcels of undeveloped land in the Yampa Valley. From the lush hay meadows, breathtaking sunsets, bugling elk, Sandhill cranes, to dramatic cliffs and massive insect hatches, the Preserve offers a multi-generation, legacy ranch investment located ten minutes from downtown Steamboat and the gondola in “Ski Town USA.”
