Idaho Ranch Market Update

By: Carlos Ordonez, Sales Associate

As stated in a recent article published by the Idaho Business Review, “The Idaho real estate market is picking up the pieces from the bubble that burst in 2008.” There is a considerable amount of smart money investing in the “Gem State’s” farm and ranch properties for many reasons. High prices in the commodities market coupled with Idaho’s productive farm ground have played a significant role in this recent spike in activity. In addition to those more publicized, the state boasts abundant resources offering private trout water and hunting opportunities. Today’s ranch Buyers search for those one-of-a-kind sporting retreats and seek to invest in this highly-desirable asset class as an alternative means to other traditional investments. A recently launched investment fund, Sporting Ranch Capital out of Dallas, Texas, was founded on this very principle. The fund recently purchased a ranch in the heart of Teton Valley, a few miles from Driggs, Idaho. Jay Ellis, Founder of Sporting Ranch Capital, describes Woods Creek, “Woods Creek represents so much of what we base our investment approach on...the ranch boasts several natural recreational attributes with great enhancement potential and spectacular views of the Teton Mountains and other surrounding mountain ranges. Factor in a conservation-rich community in a great location where people want to be, and you have a tremendous opportunity here.” Live Water Properties worked with both the Buyer and the Seller on the sale of Woods Creek Ranch.

Idaho Sales Track Record: In the past 24 months, Live Water Properties sold 18 of our Idaho ranch listings with a total listed volume of $44M. Idaho sales volumes are quite healthy as values pulled back considerably from the peak numbers of 2006-2007, offering an attractively low buy-in point in today’s market.

Winter Family Conserves Idaho Ranch: Another great conservation success story in Idaho’s Teton Basin is regarding the Winter Family’s recent conservation easement donation to the Teton Regional Land Trust, protecting nearly 400 acres and ¾ mile of Teton River frontage. The Winter Family’s Ranch, commonly known as the Three Forks Ranch, provides critical year round habitat for wildlife including elk, moose and deer. The ranch’s diverse landscape of cultivated acreage, to sagebrush benches transitioning to wetlands and river bottom also provides critical habitat for local birds of prey, native Sharp-tailed grouse, wetland birds, cranes and waterfowl. Live Water Properties and Associate Carlos Ordonez played a significant role in assisting the Winter Family piecing this large Teton Valley ranch together via numerous acquisitions over the course of 5 years. The Three Forks Ranch conservation easement is one of the most significant easements in recent years and is a true testament to this family’s dedication to conservation and commitment to ensuring the protection and survival of many of the Valley’s wildlife and precious natural resources. “The Teton Regional Land Trust was excited to work with the Winter family and others who have come to east Idaho with an eye towards recreation, privacy and conservation,” says Chet Work, Director of the Teton Regional Land Trust. “Conservation easements like the one the Winter’s have completed are an excellent way to ensure the protection of your property and may qualify for substantial tax breaks. The Brokers at Live Water Properties understand the importance of the habitat on the properties they list and the mechanics of conservation easements. The Land Trust is fortunate to have such great partners.” Thanks to the Winter Family’s recent protection as well as the years of hard work and dedication to conservation in Teton Valley by the staff at the Teton Regional Land Trust (TRLT); TRLT has now protected over 10,000 acres in Teton Valley.
